COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY. AUGUSTUS LONG HEALTH SCIENCES LIBRARY.

Records, 1909-2003 (bulk 1909-1992)

22 cubic feet (66 boxes)

HISTORICAL NOTE: The roots of the modern Health Sciences Library date to 1911, when the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons affiliated with the Presbyterian Hospital. At that time the library was established it functioned as a central “reference library” and reading room and was loosely connected to subject-specific departmental libraries.

Departmental libraries were held by Physiology, Pathology, Surgery, Surgical Pathology, Anatomy, Medicine, Biochemistry, and Pharmacology. Dental and Oral Surgery started a departmental library in 1925, and the Neurological Institute Library was officially recognized by the University Library system in 1941. Several of the doctors involved in their departmental libraries, including Curtis (Physiology), Huntington (Anatomy), and later, Webster (Plastic Surgery), eventually donated or sold their world-class subject specialty collections to the university.

The nucleus of the current Health Sciences Library (HSL) was formed 1928 when Columbia University President Nicholas Murray Butler decreed that all six libraries of the College of Physicians and Surgeons (P&S) be merged into one entity, in advance of the medical school’s move to the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in Washington Heights. In the 1930s, the creation of a rare book room and the establishment of the “M” (for Memorabilia) collection laid the foundations for the current Archives and Special Collections department.

In the years following the move, the role of the library changed significantly, as it expanded to serve all four of Columbia’s Health Sciences schools (Medicine, Dentistry, Nursing, and Public Health) as well as the Medical Center. Between 1928 and 1945, library holdings increased by 250% and circulation and attendance increased by over 700%; the library was bursting at the seams.

Discussions and planning for a new library started after World War II, but due to financial constraints, work did not begin in earnest until 1962, when an anonymous donor made a major gift towards the construction of the library with the condition that it be named in honor of Augustus C. Long (1904-2001), Chairman and CEO of Texaco and member of the Presbyterian Hospital Board of Trustees. The new library space, incorporated into the Hammer Health Sciences Building on the corner of 168th Street and Fort Washington Avenue, opened in April 1976.

In addition to expanding their physical presence, the Library also grew as a leader in the field of medical librarianship and medical library education. Thomas Fleming was a professor at Columbia's School of Library Science while he served as director of the library, and several HSL staff members, including Erich Meyerhoff and Estelle Brodman, went on to become leaders in the field. Fleming was also deeply involved in the development of the Medical Library Center of New York, a significant regional resource for medical information. In later years, HSL Director Rachel Goldstein Anderson was a key player in the development of campus-wide information networks.

SCOPE & CONTENT: Correspondence, reports, grant proposals, photographs and other materials documenting the development and operations of the library at the College of Physicians & Surgeons, later the library for the four schools of the Columbia University Medical Center: Medicine, Dentistry, Nursing and Public Health. The bulk of the records are correspondence from the administrations of seven directors: Alfred L. Robert (1912-1934); Dr. Walter R. Bett (1935-1937); Thomas P. Fleming (1937-1944; 1948-1972); C. Lee Jones (1973-1978) and Rachel Goldstein Anderson (1979-1991). There are some records dating from the administrations of Seymour Robb (1944-1947) and Susan Jacobsen (1992-1999), though those materials include little or no correspondence from them individually.

The remainder of the records document the planning and construction of the Augustus C. Long Health Sciences Library including the renovation of Hammer Plaza (1945-2003); COHAYAMED, a short-lived attempt to standardize medical cataloging at Columbia, Harvard and Yale (1962-1972); the development and implementation of an integrated academic information management system (IAIMS) (1983-1992); and finally the operations of the Parkinson's Information Center (1964-1970), an information service that was organized and run by Thomas Fleming while he was director of the HSL, but was independently staffed and operated out of the Black Building.

ARRANGEMENT/ORGANIZATION: The collection has been divided into seven series: I. Director's Correspondence; II. General Library Administration; III. Book Funds; IV. Columbia Harvard Yale Medical Cataloging (COHAYAMED) V. Integrated Academic Information Management System (IAIMS); VI. Library Physical Plant; VII. Parkinson's Information Center.

BOXES 1-45

Correspondence, reports, meeting minutes, grant proposals and other materials documenting the daily activities of the directors of the Health Sciences Library. The materials reflect the evolution of the role of the Health Sciences Librarian, who was for many years also the Director for all of the science libraries at Columbia, including the Lamont Geophysical Library; Geology and other science libraries at the Morningside campus; and libraries of organizations that were affiliated with Columbia University Medical Center, such as Harlem Hospital Center, Delafield Hospital, and the Neurological Institute.

The divisions between different directorial administrations are not strict, and in numerous instances files were maintained across multiple administrations. Furthermore, some subjects overlap between administrations, and researchers should be sure to check all five series for sources of relevant information.

Sub-series are as follows:

Sub-series 1.1: Early Years/Robert, Bett and Fleming, 1909-1963 (5 boxes, 1.66 cu. feet) Mixed correspondence, records of gifts, and book plates from the very earliest years of the modern Health Sciences Library. The records of directors Alfred L. Robert (1912-1934), Walter R. Bett (1935-1937) and Thomas P. Fleming (1937-1944; 1948-1972) were found interfiled, and have been left in their original configuration. The files are arranged alphabetically.

Sub-series 1.2 Fleming-Robb-Fleming, 1945-1970 [Bulk 1950-1970] (11 boxes, 2.66 cu. feet) Encompasses both Fleming administration as well as the Robb interregnum. Though materials in the files date from Robb years, there is little or no actual correspondence to or from his office; the bulk of the materials are Fleming's correspondence from 1950-1955 and the mid-late 1960s; arranged alphabetically.

Sub-series 1.3 Fleming II 1949-1969 [Bulk 1956-1964] (11 boxes, 2.66 cu. feet) Encompasses the middle period of Thomas Fleming's second administration, and includes correspondence between Fleming and peers at other institutions and subordinates within and without the HSL; grant proposals, and other materials. Of special interest are the materials described as "newsletters," letters between Fleming and his Associate Librarian during his sabbatical year in Japan and Hawaii. The correspondence details the daily workings of the Library, and cover a variety of topics. The files are arranged alphabetically.

Sub-series 1.4 Fleming-Jones-Anderson, 1960-1982[Bulk 1970-1978] (17 boxes, 5.66 cu. feet) Encompasses the latter half of the second administration of Thomas Fleming (1948-1972), the entirety of C. Lee Jones (1973-1978) reign, and the beginning of Rachel Goldstein Anderson's (1979-1991) time at the HSL. Includes budget notes and reports, general correspondence, and records pertaining to Columbia's affiliation with the Harlem Hospital; arranged alphabetically.

Sub-series 1.5 Jones -Anderson 1974-1993 (4 boxes, 1.33 cu. feet) Encompasses C. Lee Jones' administration (1973-1978) and Rachel Anderson's (1979-1991). Includes general correspondence as well as accreditation materials for the School of Dental and Oral Surgery (SDOS); arranged alphabetically.
